1999

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

This has been a momentous year for Deutsche Bank. In mid-1999, we joined together with Bankers Trust, significantly expanding our presence in the United States and creating one of the world's largest financial services firms.

An important outcome of the merger has been the formation of the Deutsche Bank Americas Foundation. The Foundation represents a commitment on the part of Deutsche Bank to play an active role in supporting communities in which the Bank conducts business throughout the United States, Latin America and Canada. Philanthropic grants are part of a broader effort on the part of Deutsche Bank to invest resources in distressed communities—continuing and enhancing Bankers Trust's long and outstanding record of community development. The Foundation also draws upon Deutsche Bank's proud tradition of supporting the arts, the environment and employee volunteerism.

We are particularly excited about the Foundation's potential to build new bridges of understanding between the United States and Europe. From sponsoring the Kurt Weill centenary tribute at the Brooklyn Academy of Music to hosting German environmental experts to explore strategies for redeveloping "brownfields" in New York City neighborhoods, we are in the unique position to foster a new era of cross-cultural exchange between the two continents.

Throughout the world, Deutsche Bank strives to exemplify the highest standards of accountability and performance in bringing positive change to the communities in which it operates. We are especially proud to represent that commitment within the Americas.

Sincerely,

Deutsche Bank Americas Foundation

Tomorrow Starts Today

The Deutsche Bank Americas Foundation was established in September 1999 to administer the philanthropic activities of Deutsche Bank within the United States, Latin America and Canada. Based in New York City, where the majority of grants are awarded, the Foundation supports community development, education, the arts and the environment.

Deutsche Bank is committed to working in partnership with local organizations to provide distressed communities and disadvantaged individuals with opportunities for economic advancement. The Foundation also seeks to enrich communities with access to the arts and encourages the exchange of creative expression among diverse communities.

Whether directly or through the Deutsche Bank Americas Foundation, Deutsche Bank makes grants to organizations that enhance human dignity, enliven the human spirit and seek creative solutions to complex contemporary problems. Through a strategic program of loans, investments and philanthropic grants, the Foundation—together with the Deutsche Bank Americas Community Development Group—enacts the Firm's commitment to corporate citizenship. In addition, the Bank relies on the talents of its personnel and the leadership of its management to leverage its financial commitments in addressing local needs.

Deutsche Bank provides philanthropic support in several ways: Direct grants assist a variety of nonprofit organizations—from fledgling community-based groups to world-class cultural institutions—that meet the Foundation's guidelines and correspond to the Bank's overall philosophy of responsible corporate citizenship. The Matching Gifts program matches donations made by our U.S.-based staff to charitable organizations headquartered in the United States. The Volunteer Assistance Fund provides direct grants on a competitive basis to organizations to which Deutsche Bank's U.S.-based employees volunteer their time.

Community Development

Grants from the Deutsche Bank Americas Foundation support neighborhood-based organizations that develop affordable housing, create new businesses, generate employment opportunities and address critical social needs such as job training, child care and youth development. Committed to building healthy and sustainable communities, Deutsche Bank works in partnership with outstanding local and national organizations to help community-based initiatives take root and succeed.

While housing rehabilitation and development remains central to most community rebuilding efforts, initiatives crafted at the local level to promote economic development are increasingly more common. Deutsche Bank Americas Foundation supports projects that promote business development, wealth creation and job development. In 1999, grants were awarded to the Organization for a New Equality—to support its economic literacy program; the Center for a New Urban Future—to help shape economic development policies for the City of New York that benefit low-income communities; and ACCION International—to help create a national infrastructure for the expansion of its microcredit programs throughout the United States.

Education

Deutsche Bank's commitment to the revitalization of low- and moderate-income communities is complemented by its support of public education. With a goal of achieving successful and high-performing neighborhood schools, resources are directed to programs and institutions that have proven effective in improving student learning and raising academic performance. Grants support teacher training and development, parental and community involvement, and public/private educational partnerships. In addition, education grants promote financial literacy and opportunities for young people from disadvantaged backgrounds to pursue careers in business and in finance.

Rising to the challenge of preparing youths to be economically independent, Deutsche Bank partnered with Operation HOPE, Inc., to introduce a new financial literacy initiative—Banking on the Future—to New York City's public schools. During the 1999-2000 pilot year, Deutsche Bank is leading the initiative with a $25,000 grant and administrative and volunteer support for this citywide initiative. By educating students about the importance of financial literacy and economic empowerment, Deutsche Bank is helping to prepare New York City's future workers for the new global economy.

Arts

Deutsche Bank supports those premier arts and cultural institutions that contribute to the vitality of the local communities in which our employees live and work. Recent sponsorship of exhibitions and performances included “Faces of Impressionism: Portraits from American Collections” at the Baltimore Museum of Art, “Berlin Metropolis: Jews and the New Culture, 1890-1914” at the Jewish Museum, Kurt Weill's The Eternal Road at the Brooklyn Academy of Music and Wagner's Ring at the Metropolitan Opera.

In addition, Deutsche Bank's Community Arts initiatives provide low- and moderate-income communities with access to arts education and opportunities for children and youths to develop their artistic talents. The Foundation also supports programs that utilize the arts as a tool for economic development and job creation. All grants seek to encourage the exchange of creative expression among diverse communities. In 1999, in partnership with Studio in a School, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Center for Arts Education, Arts Connection, and the Enterprise Foundation, Deutsche Bank provided arts instruction and internships for more than 1,000 young people living in New York City's low-income communities.

Environment

In recognition of the need to support the rebirth of New York City neighborhoods beyond bricks and mortar, the Deutsche Bank Americas Foundation provides grants to environmental organizations that seek to improve opportunities for open space in communities undergoing revitalization. With grants from Deutsche Bank, New York City's world-renowned environmental organizations are making their resources available to those neighborhoods most in need.

A $10,000 grant to the Horticultural Society of New York supports Apple Seed, an innovative, hands-on educational program that brings horticulture, environmental science and gardening to New York City public school children in the third, fourth and fifth grades. The goal of Apple Seed is to increase literacy in science by teaching children about plants, ecology, gardening and garden design. Since its inception in 1988, Apple Seed has reached more than 4,500 children.

Special Allocations

As part of its overall philanthropic effort, Deutsche Bank allocates funds to special event fundraisers, select charity dinners, strategic initiatives and employee programs.

In 1999, the Volunteer Assistance Fund (VAF) awarded twenty grants totaling more than $78,000. Now in its eighth year, the Fund supports employee volunteer efforts by awarding grants to community service groups where Deutsche Bank's U.S.-based employees are actively involved. To be eligible for a VAF grant, an organization must serve low-income neighborhoods or individuals. VAF grants made in 1999 included awards to the High School of Economics and Finance, the Columbia County Youth Project, the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry, and Irvine Temporary Housing—Families Forward.
